STATESMAN IS TO BE BURIED AT WIFE'S SIDE

Ramsay MacDonald Going Home To His Beloved Looismouth

By I. NORMAN SMITH

Canadian Press Staff Writer

MacDonald will be "taken home" to his beloved Looismouth, the wind-swept, rocky fells where, in the tiny cemetery of Spynie Kirk, he will be buried

Spynie cemetery is close to where the little Looismouth is situated, the fells, of which the former Prime Minister, who died last night at the age of 71, used to say "That sea and that air I'll never want to leave here for ever."

The statesman will be buried among his folk, where he was called Jim, not Ramsay. His daughter, Sheila, who was with him when he died of a heart attack in the liner Rosslyn Castle at sea while enroute for a South American holiday, witnessed her brother-in-law, the late Ramsay MacDonald, who will be taken off the ship at Bermuda and returned to England.

FOR STATE FUNERAL

Plans have not been formed for a state funeral but certainly the funeral of Looismouth will be the sight of an unusual mixture of Britain's greatest and humblest. Looismouth today "honours" the great man of the village, whose life there recently decided failing health as his wife was cut in

Ramsay MacDonald To Be Taken Home To Beloved Loamsmouth

Two lines and his walks greatly distressed him.

It was recalled how he was broken up by Philip Snowden's death a few months ago when he said: "No Philip has gone. I'll be next of the old times to the end."

"We have lost the most loving and understanding of fathers. These strong and pure and always ready to follow our lead."

HOUSE TRIBUTE COMING

To that family tribute the House of Commons this afternoon will add the tribute of legislation as saw him throw down personal popularity in the House of Commons to what he deemed to be the nation's good and sign his name to the Conservatives in a concerted effort to restore popularity. The speeches will include those of the late Mr. MacDonald, who had been a political enemy but who had been a personal friend.

Deaths came peacefully while he was in bed in St. Andrew's hospital, in his own words. "The most serene of all forms of happiness."

Troubled with a serious eye condition and a tired mind, the late Mr. MacDonald died at his home in Edinburgh, Scotland, on November 9, 1937, this year in company with his personal physician, Dr. Alfred Baldwin, he withdrew from public life.

Physicians advised a lengthy rest. He suffered from a serious eye condition and a tired mind, the late Mr. MacDonald died at his home in Edinburgh, Scotland, on November 9, 1937, this year in company with his personal physician, Dr. Alfred Baldwin, he withdrew from public life.

His elder son, Malcolm, secretary of the House of Commons, was in London at the time of his death. He was in the north of England, where he had been working on his memoirs of the war and the peace.

Fossils Shown From Dinosaur Bowl

New York, Nov. 10.—Dr. Barnum Brown, veteran fossil hunter of the American Museum of Natural History, today described a Wyoming "dinosaur bowl" from which he recovered eight skeletons.

The specimens were all dug from a single depression or bowl between a line of rocks and Rock Springs, Wyo.

We found weird things in unusual places among the remains of a gigantic beast resembling a horned turtle," he said.

WINOFF WALKS OUT ON CONFERENCE

Action Believed Russian Protest At Elimination From Committee

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10.—Foreign Minister Livinoff of Russia called a session in the Brussels conference on the Far Eastern war last night by unexpectedly announcing immediate departure for Moscow.

The abrupt manner of his leaving the conference was interpreted as a protest against a move which he believed was under way to eliminate Russia from the conference.

There were unofficial reports that Livinoff had received assurances from the conference committee that his withdrawal might create a basis for negotiations with Japan.

As yet there was no indication that Livinoff would actually participate in the conference.

The United States was understood to be prepared to insist upon Livinoff's participation in the conference.

It was understood that Livinoff's participation in the conference was a condition for the United States to participate in the conference.

Here's Photo Story of Japan's 'Big Push' on Shanghai

(1) Japanese Charge Uphill

"Win a smashing victory before the Nine-Power Conference" is the royal order that spurs on Japanese troops in their uphill fight to cut off Shanghai from central China.

(2) Meet Foe on Body-Littered Field

For weeks every attack was met by a Chinese counter attack on the hard-fought battle line around Shanghai. Massed columns of Chinese above charge against their dead and dying in a desperate effort to stem the foe's advance.

(3) Leave Flaming Village in Their Wake

Their infantry held back by the determined Chinese resistance, the Japanese let their big guns blast out a road to Shanghai. The flames and smoke of village after village marked the advance of the Japanese military.

(4) Blast Shanghai

From the rooftops of captured villages, Japanese artillery men rain death on Shanghai's defenders. Foe and non-combatants alike are targets.

(5) Creep into City

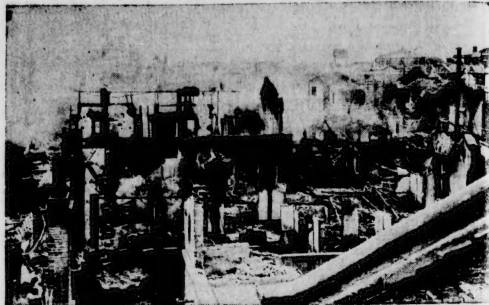

Cautiously, on guard against snipers, the infantry inches its way into villages. In the wake of tanks. Rain often held up the motorized forces.

(6) Through Fiery Ruins

A mop-up squad advances among the ruins of shell-wrecked buildings. The officer in the foreground directs the firing of buildings to smoke out snipers.

And (7) Convert Chapei into Skeleton

In Chapei, captured in the biggest Japanese victory of the drive on Shanghai, these ruins were the prize of the costly struggle. The scene is described by a Japanese news agency as "a heavily fortified Chinese position after bombardment by Japanese shells."

CECIL URGES SPAIN PEACE: JAP BOYCOTT

Veteran Diplomat Takes Issue on Mediterranean Policy

TORONTO, Nov. 10.—Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, president of the League of Nations Union of Great Britain, last night made a plea for peace in Spain and the Orient and suggested an economic boycott of Japan.

Speaking at University of Toronto at a meeting sponsored by the Toronto Peace Federation opening the peace action week of the League of Nations Society of Canada and other organizations, Lord Cecil urged machinery of the League of Nations be used in bringing peace to a troubled world.

FINISHED SCREEN
He charged the main purpose of the London non-intervention committee has been to provide a screen for intervention and that the problem was treated too much along the lines of the "old diplomacy."

"As long as war goes on in Spain and creates the most violent feelings, intervention is all but inevitable," he said.

"The only real remedy is to stop the war and for that purpose the sooner the whole controversy is transferred to the atmosphere of Geneva and away from the atmosphere of the old diplomacy the more chance there will be of success."

He said that as long as the Spanish civil war was an internal matter such a device as the non-intervention committee to prevent it spreading "was perhaps all that was feasible."

NOT ADEQUATE
But when it became a matter of international concern by reason of outside interference, then policy of non-intervention was inadequate. Turning to the Sino-Japanese conflict, Lord Cecil said: "We must be willing to let Japan do as she pleases in China, but that is just what we are doing."

"Japan is able to kill her opponents and their women and children because she has an immense superiority in weapons of war. To make peace these weapons must be required materials most of which she buys from outside, such as petrol, iron and rubber. If such countries which possess these materials refused to sell them to Japan she could not keep going on with her war."

NEED IN CHINA
He said a relatively small number of countries buy most of Japan's goods of which the chief is silk. If these countries refused to buy most of their goods, the war would not last long.

"I know it is said that if we did that Japan would go to war and attack our territories," he declared. "It is not for a moment believe she would be guilty of such suicidal folly. But if she did we should be dead, have to defend ourselves. That would be very serious."

"It seems to me to raise very clearly the essential issue as to whether we should be dead or alive."

Nazi Bitterness Seen In Anti-Jew Exhibit: Masonic Lodge Shown

MUNICH, Nov. 10.—Julius Streicher, leader of the Nazi campaign against Jews, opened an anti-Semitic exposition today with an attack on western countries whose democracy he said was "but the measure of the power Jews already have achieved."

The exposition is entitled, "The Wandering Jew," and part of the display is devoted to "the Jews in America."

WORLD ENEMY
Streicher proclaimed, "It is our holy duty to preach communally the existence of the Jewish world enemy, and declared nations which are proud to be governed democratically still believe in the fairy tale of the Jewish race's 'Gentle mission.'"

The exposition is decorated with caricatures of Jewish faces, and casts of characters.

aim of one foreign policy. No question that if what is called our democracy were attacked by Japan, our ships were deliberately sunk by her, or our territory bombarded, we should be ready to take action that was necessary to stop the aggression."

POLICE URGE FINGER PRINTS VOLUNTARILY

Recent Cases of Benefit to Relatives Cited in Ottawa Report

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—Voluntary filing of fingerprints by the general public with police should be encouraged, report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police states.

Many instances of the value of fingerprints for identification purposes apart from criminal investigations have come to light.

"It is certain that at least the travelling public (and who is not a traveller) should be encouraged to file their prints with us for use in case of misfortune," wrote Inspector W. W. Watson of the fingerprint section.

"During the year we identified two unfortunates simply because of their past criminal records. In one instance we were able to satisfy an insurance company this promptly benefiting the beneficiary."

"Only recently a gentleman of periodic loss of memory condition filed his prints with us. Possibly much worry would have been saved in numerous other instances if imprints of certain individuals were available for comparison purposes."

The two "unfortunates" referred to were men found dead on railway tracks. One, found at St. Boniface, Man., was identified as Steve Kizicki whose prints were on record because he had been convicted in Port Arthur for assault.

FROM OTTAWA
The other man was found at Belleville, Ont., and his prints were on file because of some offence. He was found to have been a former resident of Ottawa. There was insurance on his life and his relatives were notified.

One man was arrested although he took the precaution to wear gloves. A year on one of the gloves was his undoing. He was Thomas L. McGill and the offence was breaking into a service station at Lindsay, Ont.

Peak Passed, Says Vancouver Chief

The chief constable said he believed transients who arrive in Vancouver during the last two months were partly the cause of the numerous crimes.

"Of the 1,500 persons who arrived in the city a great many have gone to forestry camps and others have started back east," the police chief said. "However, there is still a residue here."

Chinese vegetable store operators were victims of two holdups today within a half hour. A total of $80 was obtained.

This Buttery Joins Hot Stove League For Winter

This buttery will be a little different about the season, but it certainly has enough sense to try to get out of the cold.

Saturday afternoon, Mr. J. Connery, 8609-10 avenue, opened his kitchen window to get some fresh air, and was astonished to see a butterfly dart for the opening, enter the kitchen and alight near the kitchen stove.

Saying may be here, but the butterfly preferred to get away from the cold outdoors, and is still in the kitchen, Mr. Connery says.

"You see, I'm a very conventional studio or presentable place."

"I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either."

"I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either."

"I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either."

"I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either. I'm not conventional, either."

For of course a woman of this type would have love affairs which would burn out eventually, without ever having revealed any real or lasting devotion.

Alan J. regarded his prejudice against a woman, or any stranger, as his private affair, and had just the way back to the studio. He raised the shades high to the windowed recess, so that the rich tints of his picture might be revealed to his visitor.

He looked at his portrait, the real head of a young Russian aristocrat, as he remembered her. It felt a sudden distaste, thinking of the two pictures which had flashed into his mind a moment before.

This one, despite the rich red of the velvet apron, the violet-blue eyes and shining black hair, seemed strangely colorless in comparison.

"I like it," Ardath said.

Alan warned to the simple statement, She was ignorant, he knew. Very ignorant about cultural things. But she made no pretense of knowledge, for which he admired her.

"Who is she?" Something prickled through Ardath's throaty tone. Alan recognized it instinctively as something close to jealousy. The reaction of even a woman of every other woman as a rival.

He smiled a little. A smile that lifted the gravity on his handsome young face.

"She was a girl I knew in Petrograd," he explained. "She was of noble birth, but when I met her she was a waitress in a restaurant. I persuaded her to go with me, and I put her in a rooming house. It was a color that suited her, and belonged to her."

"Oh," Ardath murmured. "This time jealousy of the proud young woman, who had been set apart from her by Alan's tone was in the open. "You were in love with her, I suppose."

"Not at all," Alan replied, and was amazed at seeing satisfaction given, uninvited, to Ardath's eyes. How simple, how crude, but true in her methods. She was primitive in her emotions. But that did not make her less pitiable. But more pitiable.

"I don't suppose," Ardath spoke abruptly, that you would care to paint me?"

Alan would paint her. But he was surprised for her direct question. Paradoxically, he didn't want to paint her. He had a feeling that perhaps contact with this young woman might not be especially good for him. At least not especially rewarding artistically.

"It was all very well to visualize her on two canvases. But putting her there—especially in the mood his imagination had evoked, with her full lips parted to reveal gleaming teeth—might be more difficult.

Father than be an inspiration, she might play havoc with it.

"I don't know," Alan temporized. "Have you ever posed for pictures?"

"I'm a model for clothes," Ardath replied. "I pose every day for somebody. I shouldn't think it hard to be an actor's model."

She had seated herself on the sofa and the rich color of her dress emphasized her exotic qualities.

"What a model for clothes," Alan said. "I shouldn't think it hard to be an actor's model."

"What kind of model?" Ardath questioned her eyes on him.

"Alan colored. Never mind that he had thought the girl before him into confidence, she was mistaken. He thought he was his own man. There had never been a woman yet he would care to share them with.

Yes, there had been one. A beautiful, fiery-eyed girl, whose clear eyes had looked deep into the soul of his deities. A conspiracy to tempt his pride and professional integrity. A conspiracy to make a fool of him.

The thought of Jill, bringing with it the pain of broken romance and disillusionment, made him feel more tolerant of this girl with her purposes so honestly exposed. Yet she would probably prove an apt model.

He didn't like her. He didn't trust her. But he might paint her would leave the issue on the lips of the gods. Tomorrow he might be inclined to smile over the woman alone and the woman awake.

"I think," drawled Ardath, who had watched indecision playing over her face, and very wisely left her to it. "I'll leave my address and telephone number. After all, you might need a model, some day, who knows?"

Alan took the card she gave him and walked with her to the door. He had probably given an apt model.

After she had looked at the small card, Ardath felt. The name seemed to suit. The address, he told himself, meant nothing to him.

It was just as well to tear it up this small card that was a tangible temptation of some kind.

But instead, Alan crossed to a desk and dropped the card into a drawer which held some receipts and more important bills.

The next day Alan saw Jill's picture, as he carefully turned the pages of a newspaper.

He read it, he was having a half. The date was some time away, but the event was heralded as of major importance in the winter calendar.

"By now," Alan decided fervently determined to face after reality. "She has probably forgotten that she ever knew me. If she hasn't, she will when all the parties begin. The picture is all right, but I'll think about it."

He had known Jill was ready for any excitement which would act as a temporary escape from thinking at all.

The brilliant ball was one Mr. Wentworth had had in mind a Spanish flamenco limit off Gilpin, which fell recently to the Spanish insurgents.

even been given and to yank with the elaborate parts of the arrangement.

It would be, Jill thought, with a new cynicism, exactly like a ball about. Look at what marriage with the daughter of John Wentworth would be like. Not to be ignored even if her debut is two seasons' dead.

Her mother was desperately eager for her to marry. Well in this respect she was just as very different from most of the other women. Jill thought. All of them were anxious to keep at daughter's wedding, and give the bridegroom a grateful kick on the cheek for taking them away.

Well, at least, she would compromise regarding the ball, and be accepted once more.

And then came an electric flash through the hall, and he played with the happy idea, which was entirely within the realm of possibilities.

"I can't understand your sudden enthusiasm for the party," Mrs. Wentworth said, frowning Jill with a speculative eye. "Is there some special reason?"

She always distrusts Jill's special reasons, which were so cunningly unconvincing, so different from the ideas of her set.

Just the same, Jill sang as she prevaricated bravely. She added, a little anxiously, "Sometimes I think maybe we shouldn't have such a large party. Mother, haven't you noticed that father has been looking worried lately?"

"Nonsense," Mrs. Wentworth's voice was sharp. "What could possibly have to worry about? Most men look worried when they have of impressing their wives with their importance. Every husband thinks of himself as an Atlas going around with the world on his shoulders. You never see any of them cutting out parties like this."

Just the same, Jill resolved. If she found father out, all her romanticism of the moment before seemed childish and absurd now. If father didn't want the party, they weren't to have one.

If he did, she would send Alan in invitation.

None Abandoned
By Navy, Says Lord

LONDON, Nov. 10.—Answering recent opposition criticism of the Royal Navy, Alfred Duff Cooper, first lord of the admiralty, last night told a Conservative meeting he could find no cases had occurred of anyone falling into water who was not recovered.

Opposition speakers in the house of commons had charged that the navy had failed at meetings declared warships had not assisted Spanish refugees drowned under the Spanish flamenco limit off Gilpin, which fell recently to the Spanish insurgents.

Premier King Forecasts Unemployment Insurance

PROVINCES ASKED FOR CO-OPERATION

If Aid Given Measure Will Come Down At Next Session

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—Labor Minister Rogers today said that "it might be fair to assume" the National Unemployment Insurance scheme which Prime Minister Mackenzie King has proposed to the provinces would be on some contributory basis. He intimated, too, that the federal government probably would be prepared to accept responsibility, administrative and financial, for the operation of an insurance plan if the provinces agreed to give the dominion jurisdiction in this field.

OTTAWA, Nov. 10.—A national system of unemployment insurance to be initiated at the next session of parliament was proposed in a letter sent by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to the premiers of the nine provinces and to the federal government today.

Agreement of the provinces on an amendment to the British North America Act would be necessary to empower the federal government to enact the necessary legislation, and the letter asked the provincial governments to submit their views.

SEKS AMENDMENT
Should the necessary agreement be forthcoming Mr. King said, the government proposed to seek a constitutional amendment by the customary joint resolution of both houses of parliament addressed to the parliament at Westminster. He pointed out no difficulty in obtaining the amendment if the provinces were in agreement.

The prime minister hoped also that the constitutional amendment could be obtained in time to present the measure at the same session. He would not say what particular unemployment insurance scheme was contemplated or whether it would be contributory.

The letter referred to a recommendation from the National Employment Commission and added that the government shared "the opinion that a national system of unemployment insurance within federal jurisdiction is a necessary complement of any plan of national employment insurance."

Following is a copy of the letter in part addressed to the premiers:

"My Dear Premier:
My colleagues and I are convinced that a national system of unemployment insurance would constitute materially to individual security and industrial stability throughout the country and would assist in mitigating the distress incident to any recurrence of widespread unemployment."

A strong recommendation with respect to nationalization of employment offices, based upon a full investigation of the unemployment situation throughout the country, has been submitted to the government by the national employment commission.

SHARE OPINION
We share the opinion that a national employment service within federal jurisdiction is a necessary complement of any plan of national employment insurance.

"We believe it is most desirable that legislation establishing a national system of unemployment insurance and of public employment offices should be enacted. Should it be possible to obtain the co-operation of the governments of the several provinces toward this and we are prepared, at the next session of parliament, to introduce the necessary measures."

Under the constitution the provinces have jurisdiction over such services and the "Unemployment and Social Insurance Act" passed by the parliament in 1935 during the Bennett administration was found unconstitutional by the Supreme Court and the Privy Council because it invaded the rights of the provinces.

If it were backed by the approval of the provinces a joint resolution of the House of Commons and the Senate petitioning the British parliament to effect the necessary amendment would be quickly granted, the Prime Minister believes.

In making the announcement the Prime Minister said it was not the government's intention to await the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations before proceeding with social reconstruction which might require legislative changes. He did not indicate any other legislation that might be in prospect.

WINNING, Nov. 10.—Premier John Bracken said today the Manitoba government would give its assistance toward establishment of a national system of unemployment insurance.

"Naturally we will facilitate the move in every possible way," he said, "but Bracken's only concern."

Russia Denies Note To Warsaw
WARSAW, Nov. 10.—The official Polish news agency last night declared there was no foundation to reports current here early today that Soviet Union delivered a verbal warning it would consider intervention by Poland in the German-Japanese anti-Communist pact as an unfriendly act.

The agency declared, "such an intervention would, moreover, be pointless, since the Polish government will consider only its own interests."

The Greeks knew the earth was a round sphere, more than a thousand years before Columbus made the famous voyage.

Faces Axe—Cheerful

Talking animatedly with his beautiful wife Margaret, 18, crisp-mouthed Baron Egon Karl von Mautschenk smiled in Detroit as this picture was made, despite his fears of being returned to Germany to face a Nazi executioner's axe. An U.S. consul at Windsor, Ont., had just refused the couple's plea for visas to permit them to stay in the United States. The Baron fled Germany with his wife in 1936 to escape compulsory army service. Unless the U.S. government intervenes they will be deported.

NEWSPAPER IS PADLOCKED AS COMMUNISTIC

Montreal Daily Raided On Instructions From Premier Duplessis

QUEBEC, Nov. 10.—For the first time in the history of the province, Premier Maurice Duplessis invoked today for the first time the law designed to "protect this province against communist propaganda" by ordering a "raid" on the offices of the Montreal daily newspaper, La Presse (the light).

The offices and building where the newspaper was published, were raided by provincial officers after they carried out files and all available back numbers of the paper, which Montreal communists said was not an official organ of the party.

ONLY BEGINNING
Today's closure, the premier declared in making the announcement to representatives of Quebec labor unions, "is only the beginning of our activities." He made no further reference to the paper or to plans for future action.

But he urged the labor leaders, who were government representatives of their unions, to purge their ranks of communists, who he said occupied "high positions" in some unions.

FIRST CASE
It was the first time the premier, also attorney-general of the province, made use of the "padlock" law, passed at the last legislative session, to give police authority to lock buildings to prevent "circulation of communist propaganda."

Orders for the raid were kept secret, and first official announcement came from the premier, who has declared in public repeatedly that "communism will not be tolerated in this province."
